

EXERCISE 112. In the following passage, circle each clause marker, and bracket the entire dependent clause. Be ready to explain how you decided where each dependent clause begins and ends.

Once upon a time after he had established his worship in Greece the 1 god, Bacchus, was traveling with his companion, Silenus, in Phrygia. 2 Shepherds in the area did not recognize Silenus when they found him 3 drunk in their fields and so took him to King Midas. Since Midas had 4 accepted the rites of Bacchus, however, he recognized the god's friend 5 and after he threw a big party he sent him back to Bacchus. Because 6 he was grateful, Bacchus granted Midas one wish, and Midas said, 7
"May everything I touch turn to gold." Although Bacchus was sorry the 8 monarch had not chosen better, he granted this wish. Now when Midas 9 touched a leaf, it turned to gold! And if he picked up a stone, it turned 10 to gold! While this gift was new, Midas rejoiced in his luck, but soon he 11 came to regret his wish. For although he became very rich, he found he 12 could not even eat or drink. When he picked up bread, it also turned to 13 gold, and when he tried to drink fresh water, it hardened as soon as his 14 lips touched the liquid. Finally he begged Bacchus for help and the god 15 told him to go where he could wash away his "magic touch." 16
